CANNANORE CANTONMENT BOARD

BRIEF OF CANTONMENT BOARD, CANNANORE :

Kannur, also known as Cannanore, is a town of great antiquity in Kerala, There are many myths and legends behind the name Kannur. It is said to be derived from two Malayalam words, 'Kannan' (Krishna) and 'Ur' (Place), making it the place of lord Krishna. The anglicised name Cannanore was drawn from its ancient name "Kannur". Kannur is known as the land of looms and lores, because of its handloom industry and festivals held in temples. Kannur is famous for its pristine beaches and Theyyam, its native performing art.

There is no evidence of the Paleolithic man having lived in this region. Nevertheless, rock cut caves, dolmens, burial stone circles and menhirs, all of megalithic burial order of the neolithic age have come to it in Thaliparamba-Kannur-Thalassery area. It can be assumed that the batch of aryan immigrants entered Kannur area through the Tuluva region.

Kannur was part of Chera kingdom, which ruled most of Kerala during 800 to 1102 AD. Later Kannur was the capital of the Kolathiri Rajas of Chirakkal, whose kingdom had trading relations with Arabia and Persia in the 12th and 13th centuries. In his travelogues 1290s, Marcopolo has referred to this place as a great emporium of spice trade. By the 14th century Mooshaka Kingdom known as Kolathunad and the rulers known as Kolathiris were prominent in Kerala. The Kolathiris were a power to reckon with at the end of the 15th Century. They were political and commercial rivals of the Zamorins of Kozhikode.

Vasco-da-Gama landed at Kappakadavu beach (approx 90 Km south of Kannur) on 27 May 1498. In 1501 Joao d' Nova est a small factory at Kannur. During his sec visit in 1502 Vasco-da-Gama built a palisade next to the small factory in Kannur and stationed 200 Portuguese soldiers there. In 1505 the Portuguese Viceroy Dom Francesco d' Almeida obtained permission from the Raja to construct Fort, St. Angelo. From 1501 to 1663 the Portuguese maintained their hold on Kannur.

The Dutch captured Fort St. Angelo in 1663 and sold it to the Ali Raja of Arakkal in 1772. The British took over the Fort in 1790 when Bibi of Arakkal family surrendered to the British. In the latter half of the 18th century, Hyder Ali and Tipu Sultan, rulers of Mysore, conquered much of the dist and came into conflict with British. In 1792 at the conclusion of the third Anglo-Mysore War, the British took over Kannur and the surrounding region, which became the new Malabar district of British India's Madras Presidency.

Cannanore Cantonment came into existence on 18 Mar 1772 and Cannanore Cantonment was formed on 01 Jan 1938. During this period the British enlarged the Fort and built accomodation for one European Regiment, two native regiments, one regiment of native foot artillery, one military hospital and a jail. Since independence, Cannanore became the part of Indian Defence. It is the only Cantt in Kerala.

The old Cannanore Station comprised of the whole of old Malabar District under Madras Presidency. On formation of State of Kerala, it is covered the area of North Kerala (also called North Malabar Region) comprising districts of Cannanore, Calicut and Malappuram.
